

Structural biology from the nanoscale to cellular mesoscale

In partnership with the Biophysical Society of China

November 3–5, 2023 — Huangshan, China

Supporting Journals

Recent advances have pushed the boundaries of structural biology, enabling the in situ structure determination of large protein complexes within their native cellular environments. Cryo-electron tomography (cryo-ET) bridges the gap to the cellular mesoscale by providing structural information for organelles and entire cells.

Topics include:

- Recent structures of membrane proteins and macromolecular machines
- Advances in structural virology
- Structural immunology, host-pathogen interactions
- in situ structural biology

Organizers

Zihe Rao, Honorary President Biophysical Society of China

Xiangxi Wang, Institute of Biophysics, CAS

Karin Kühnel, editor-in-chief, Structure

Jia Cheng, scientific editor, Cell
